Well, there is a lot of anger, I can attest to that. She wrote what she wrote....since it was basically her policy/practice, and since she has played such a prominent role in women's athletics, both here and nationally, her voice on this is not uncalled for. She is still consulting and in the field, and she still have a close relationship with the RU athletic staff. I think the statement that went out was fair and balanced, but the athletic administration feels besieged and attacked (which they have been). Some of these folks have been on the front lines of Title IX and gender equality, so I can understand their frustration and anger....and hurt. We will get beyond this if cooler heads prevail.

Saying they're going be united in anger - against whom - Ali? Against the rest of the University?
It's a very odd way to end a letter to the President

Is she making a threat? Her last sentence sure sounds that way

Dr. Houshmand

I have attached a letter regarding the current issue that has been all over the news. I felt compelled to write you and let you know how I felt about things. Thank you in advance.
